

Business Model
for elderly care facilities in Japan

Fumiko Kokura Apr. 23, 2025

Mission

Transform a physical place into a place where the elderly can remember the good moments and create an environment where they can find peace of mind

Belief

I agree that there is dignity
in the existence of humans,
the time they have created,
and the emotions they have.

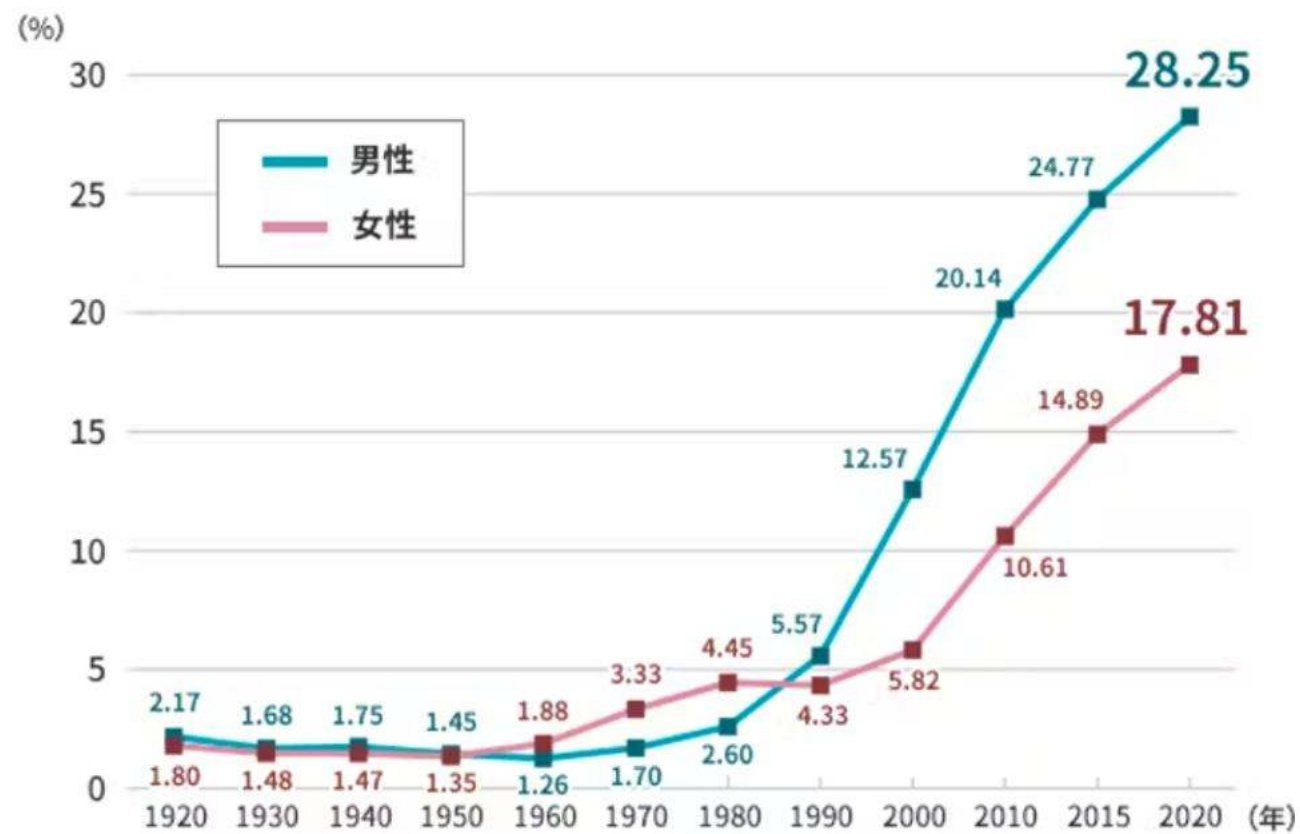

Japanese Social Issues

Japan has a rapidly aging society: a low birth rate, long lifespans, and has a very high percentage of elderly people

The proportion of people in Japan who never marry (by the age of 50) has been increasing causing housing problems in their old age.

- Men: 28%
- Women: 18%

- The average life expectancy of Japanese people is long.
- How should they spend their old age?

Customer Profile

My customer profile: people who never marry

My goal: create a nursing home where these people can live out their retirement years comfortably, with dignity and peace of mind.

It's similar to CCRC (Continuing Care Retirement Community) in the United States,

Apartments where independent elderly people can live, called serviced senior housing, are currently our competitors.

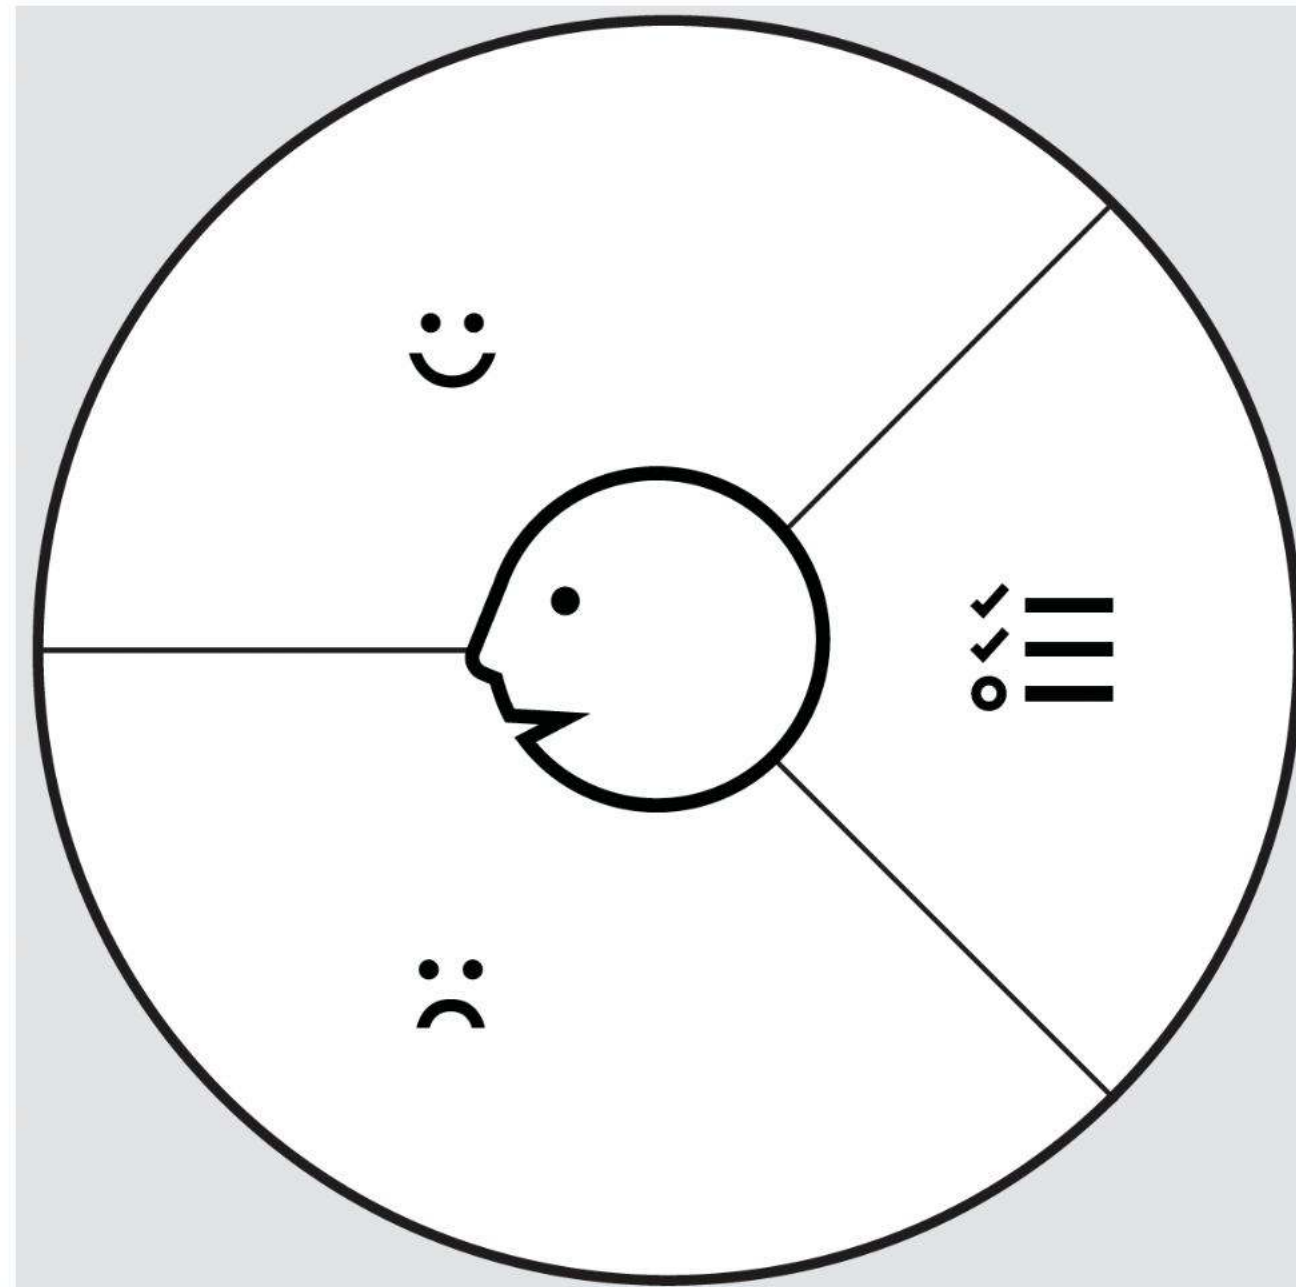

Competitors

Competitor: serviced senior housing

Real estate agents who build these apartments receive subsidies from the government when they build them, but some of these apartments do not necessarily offer a comfortable living environment.

Customer Profile - Customer Job

Customer Job

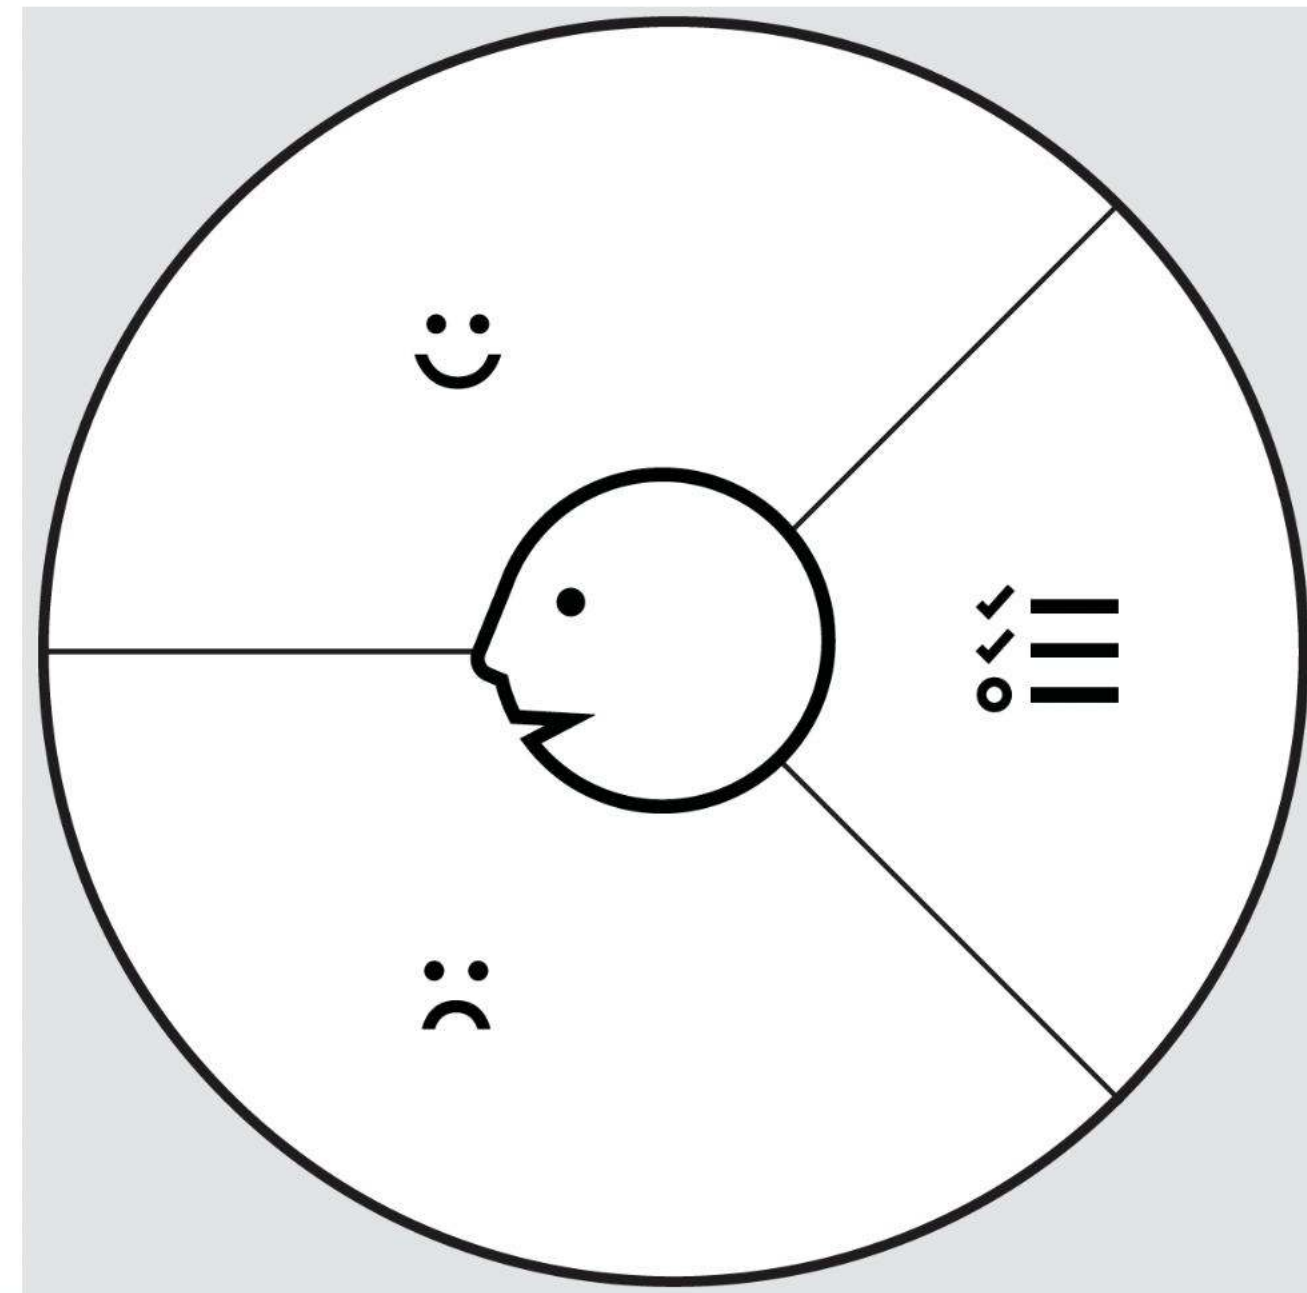

I'm not yet bedridden, so I want more freedom than I would in an ordinary nursing home.

I want flexible rules and a system that allows me to make my own choices.

I'll deal with my illness, but I want to maintain my freedom of movement as much as possible.

Customer Profile - Customer Pain

It is difficult to find a senior care facility that meets your needs.
Normal nursing homes offer little freedom to go out.
It is difficult to find good doctors, good nurses, and good care managers.
How can we find good personnel?

Communal Gardens

Take a walk in the Communal Garden freely.

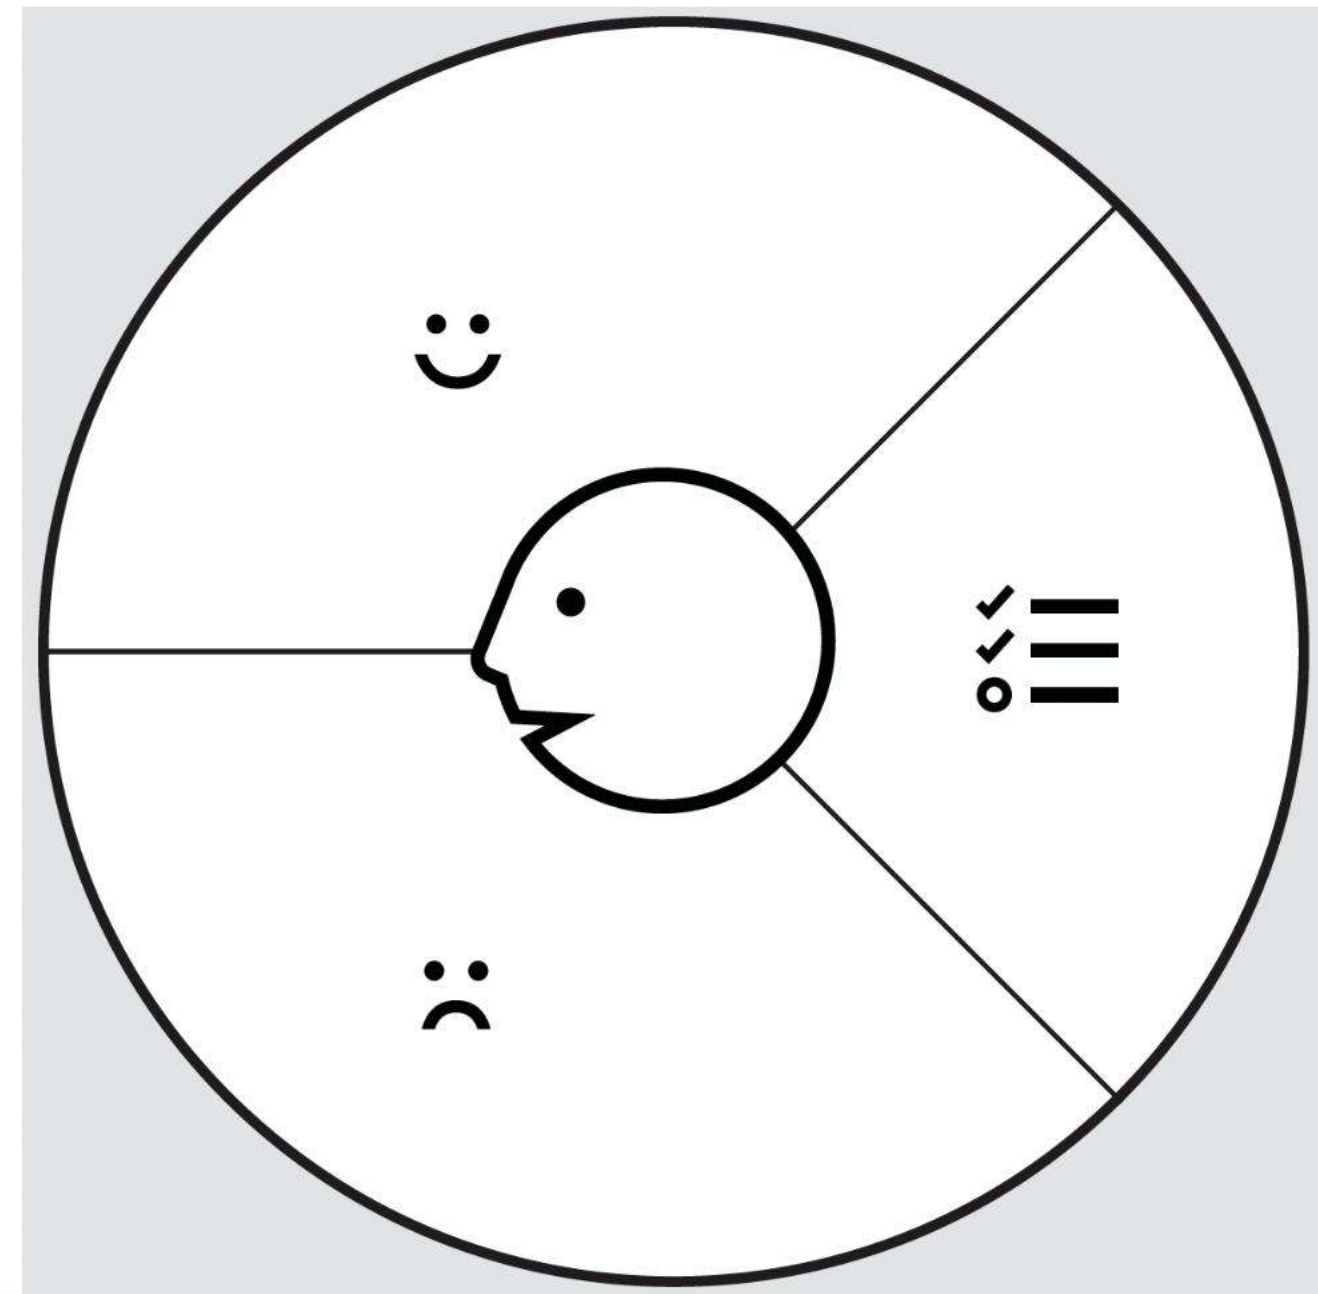

The photo on the left is the communal garden of the apartment where I lived in Japan.

I often sat on this bench and felt the breeze. The photo on the right is a small art museum designed by architect Tadao Ando. The garden is wonderful.

Customer Profile - Customer Gain

I want to walk around the garden freely.
I want to go out freely.
I want to eat alone or with friends sometimes.
I don't want to be tied down by rules.

Value Proposition - Product & Service

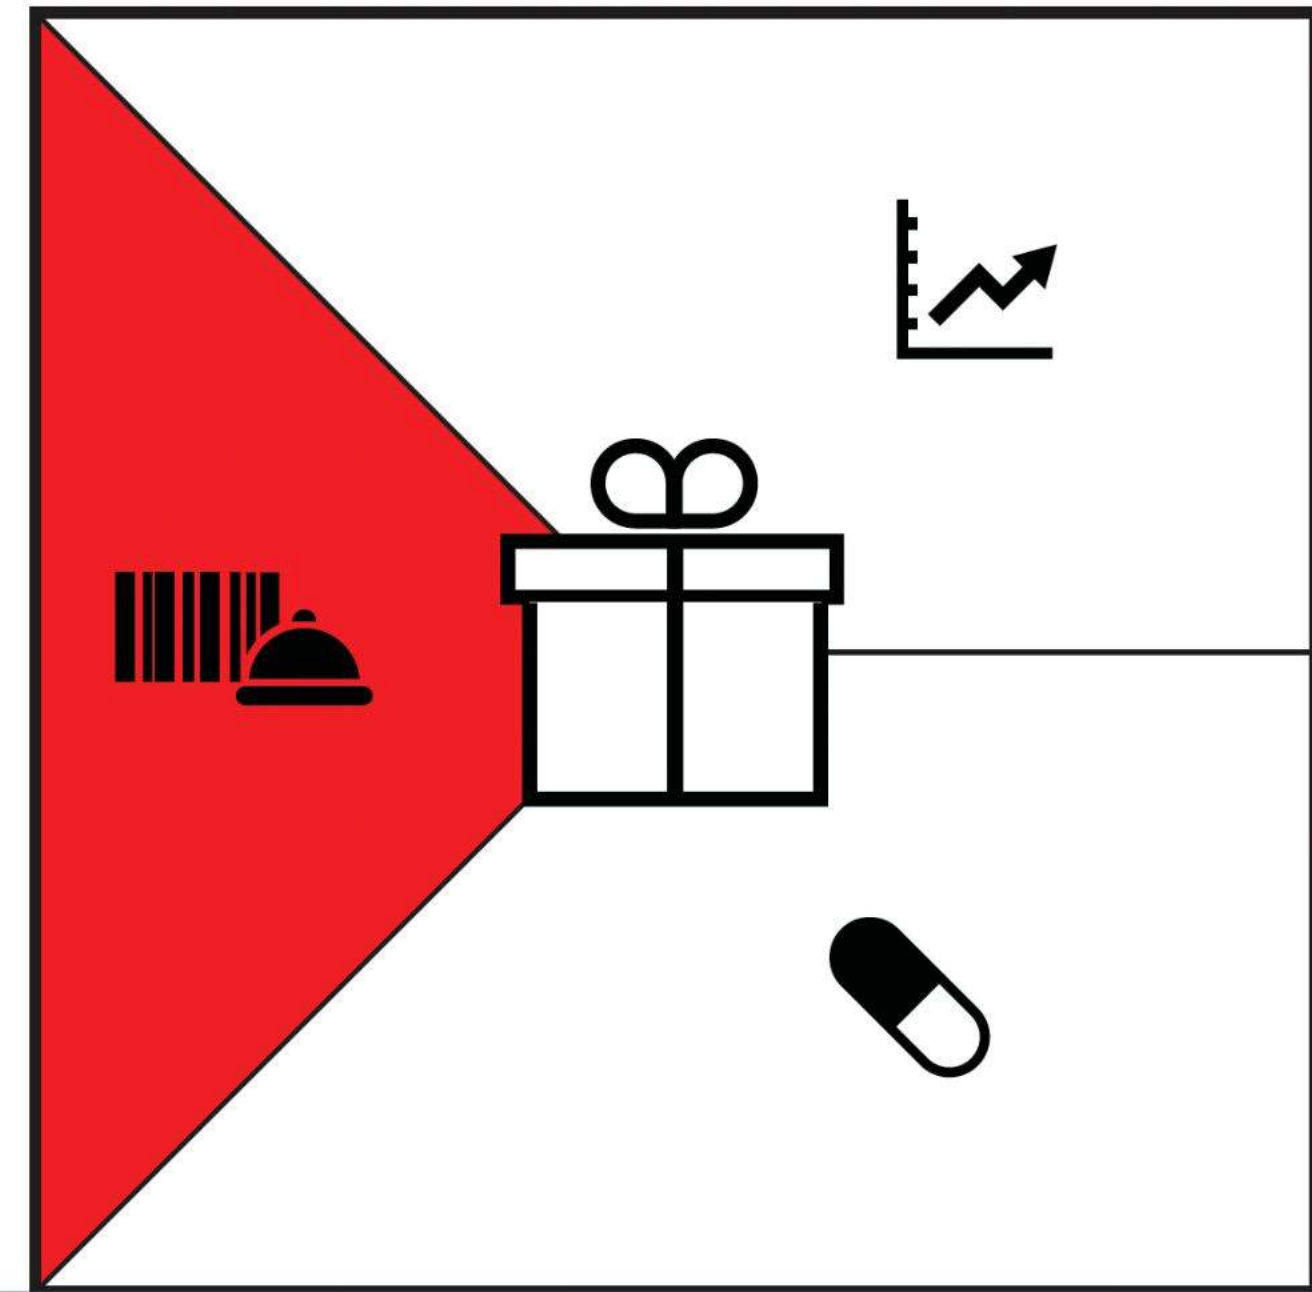

This is the perfect home for those who want to manage every aspect of their lives. Dine here or eat out.

Gather in the kitchen or living room or relax in your room

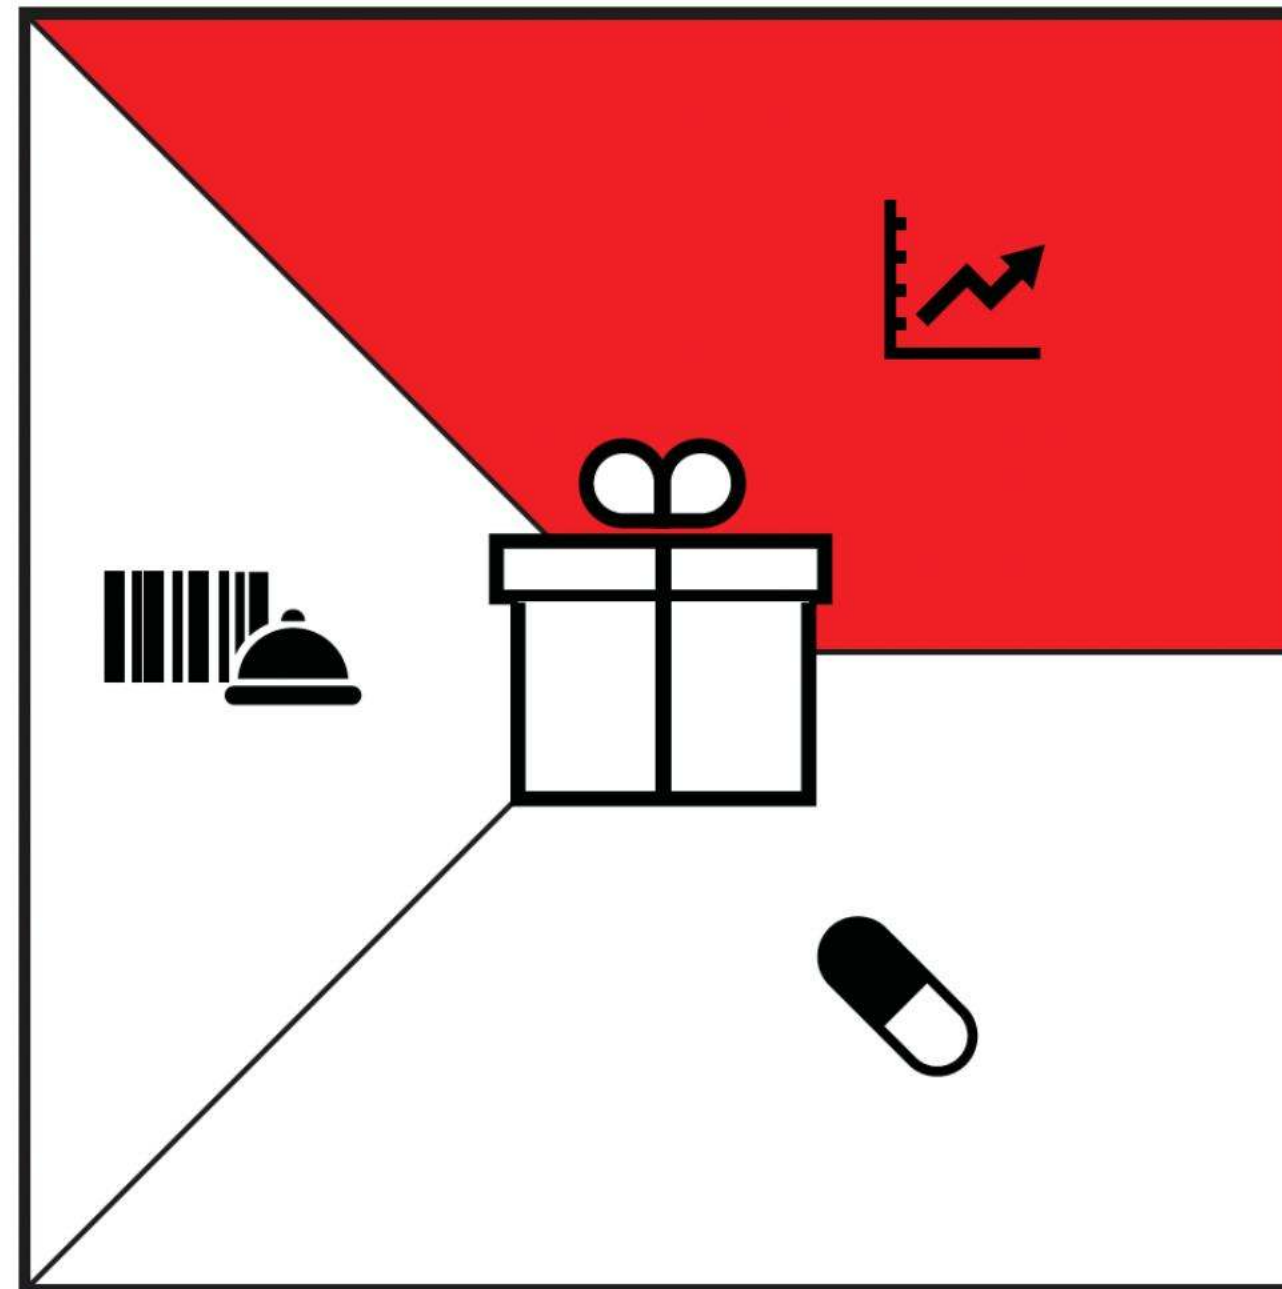

Nursing homes with no strict rules

Move in while you're healthy

Our home is located near a tram stop, which means you can quickly get into town, and you can feel the excitement of riding the tram to access the city center

Value Proposition - Gain Creator

Enjoy freedom Experience the excitement of the city, which is stimulating.
Ride the tram and enjoy the scenery.

You can interact with residents who work remotely
from home.

Value Proposition - Product & Service

You can choose to escape or embrace solitude. This home is inhabited by people who work remotely and interact with them regularly. But if you prefer quiet time, there's a library on-site. Expand your mind in a Library.

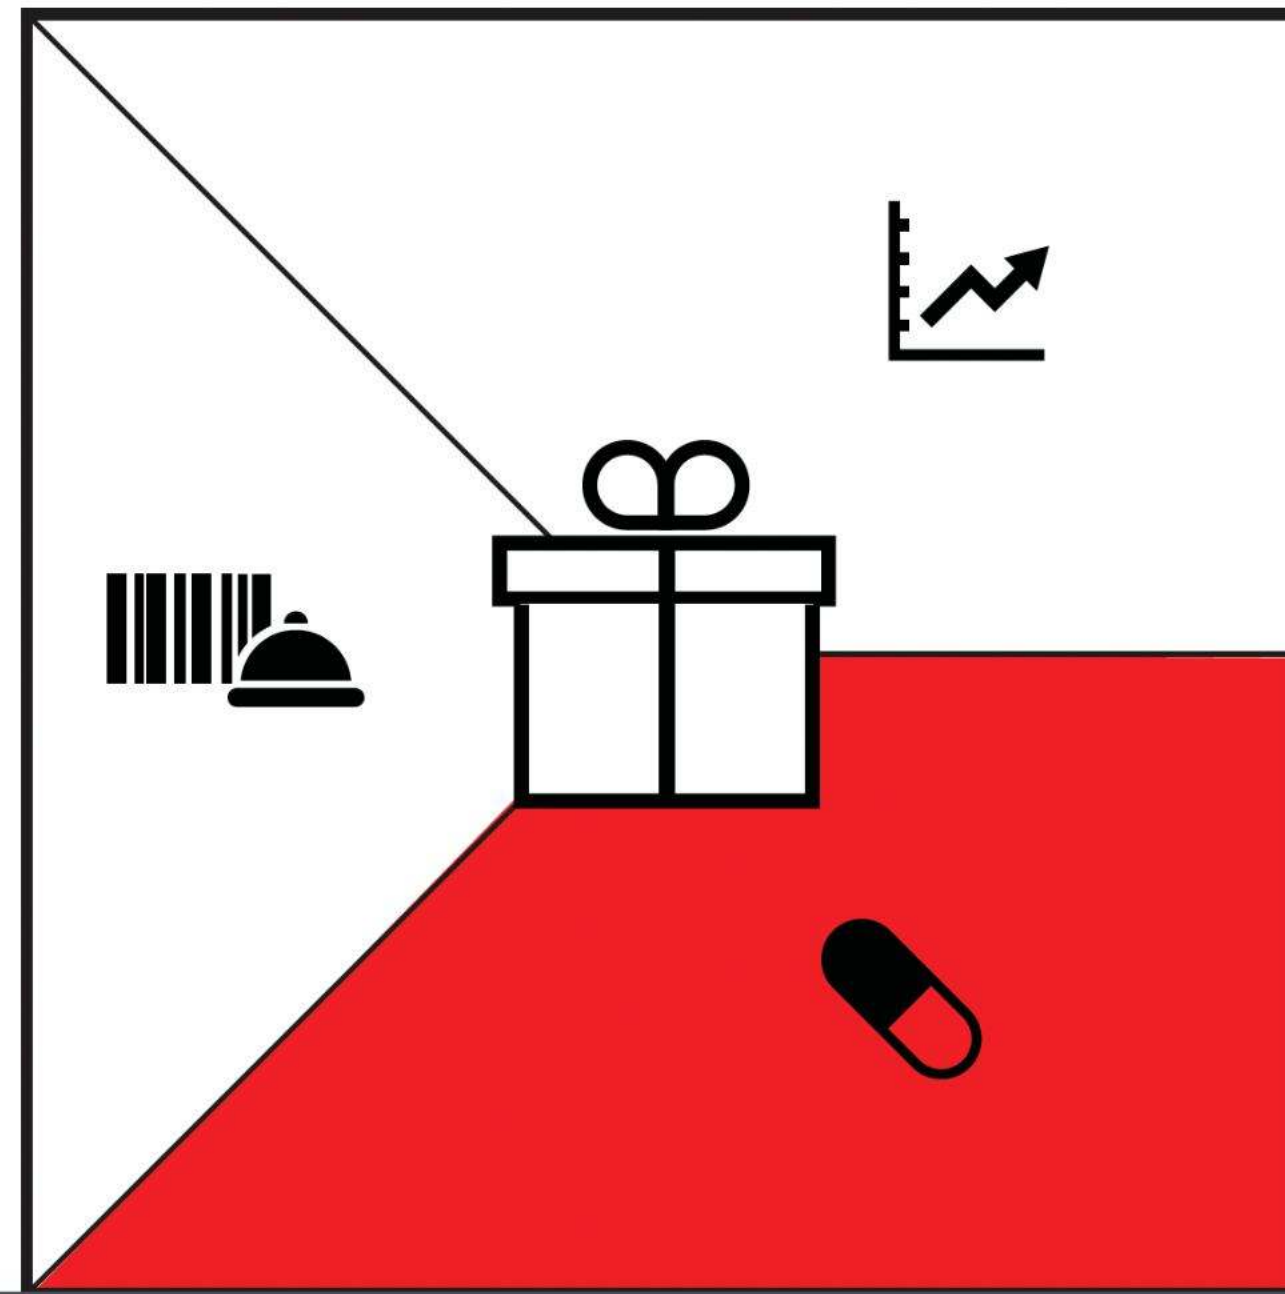

Communal Space: a kitchen or a living room

Maggie's Centre, a cancer care centre in London designed by architects Rogers Stirk Harbour + Partners,

Value Proposition - Pain Reliever

Friendly counselors
Open organization
Good care manager

We are getting good staff
for the facility, and it doesn't have to be internal staff but external partnerships.

Peace and Dignity

These are places where I believe there is dignity in human existence, the time that humans create, and the emotions that humans have.
