

flashclub

AN ONLINE SUPPORT PLATFORM FOR
ANYONE EXPERIENCING MENOPAUSE

77%

of women experiencing menopause symptoms say that the side effects impact their quality of life and mental health.

Is it really
so bad?

hint: yes

*"It's a nightmare of f*cking epic proportions...

I just don't have the proper bandwidth to handle it all."

Industry Analysis

Industry Trends

Current trends show an increase in product-based offerings to support women, but there is a largely untapped market around mental health.

Financial Landscape

The menopause market is worth an estimated 600b currently and growing, and innovation within the space is booming.

Drivers

Social advocacy around issues related to menopause are driving a robust conversation around the topic, which was previously rarely discussed.

Problems and Proposed Solutions

Mental health supporting menopause is lacking.

Create a platform to complement the clinical care practices that already exist, with community support and therapists that are prepared to discuss the physical, emotional, sexual transitions.

Therapists don't have an easy way to reach clients in need.

Offer a network of targeted clients for menopause-specialized therapists to build consistent patient-base.

Businesses don't know how to support their employees.

Build metrics around platform success, allowing businesses to see the value that they can offer their employees through a flashclub membership.

So, what is flashclub exactly?

Community Platform

Affordable monthly membership price that allows users access to menopause-specific online forums, zoom meet-ups on specific topics, and evidence-based content.

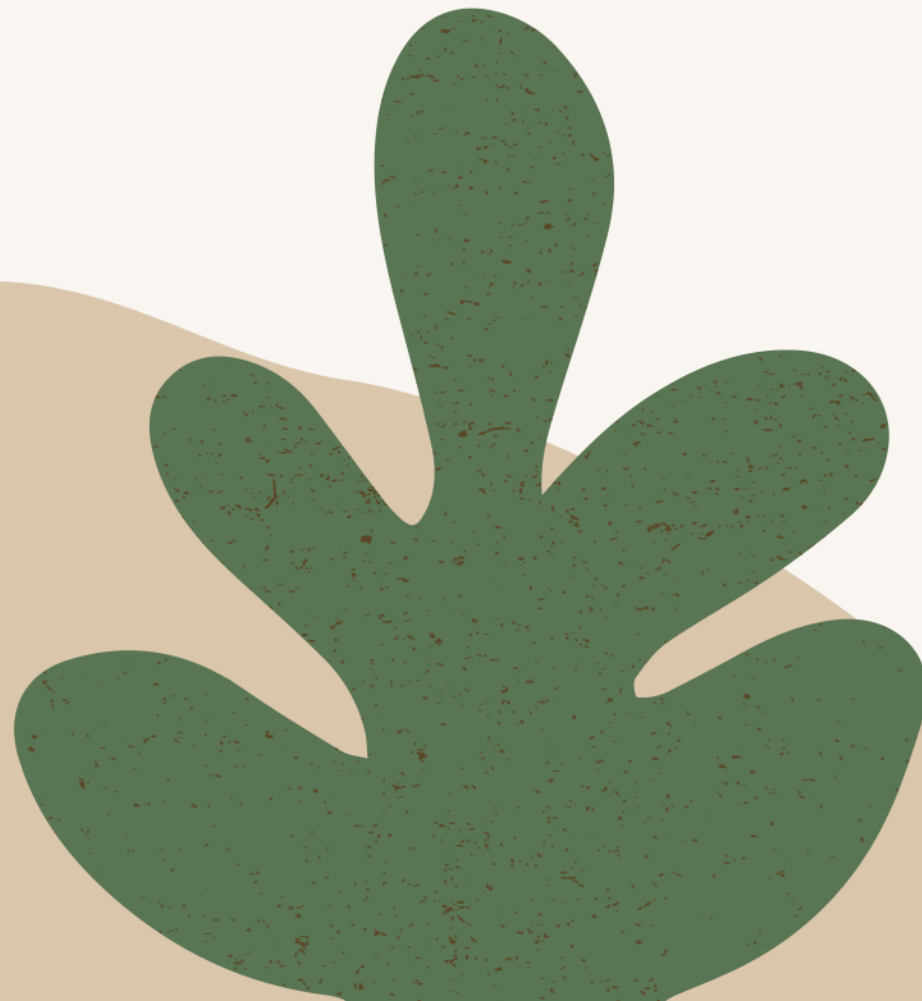

Online Therapy Services

Premium monthly membership inclusive of 1:1 therapy sessions with an experienced therapist who has tools to manage the complexity of issues that menopause side effects present.

Open to Individuals and Businesses

Single users are able to sign up, but the financial model is primarily based on selling corporate memberships to businesses looking to scale up their inclusivity policies.

An Array of Users

- middle-aged women
- medically-induced menopause patients
- people taking gender-transition medication

Growth Calendar

Year 1-2	Research, build platform, hire network of therapists. Break even
Year 3-5	Expand corporate client base and therapist base sustainably. Become profitable and grow bottom line.
Year 5-10	Research and explore new products, growth streams. Fully recoup investment funds and increase return.

Will you INVEST?

The Ask: $1 million
for startup costs from The Sharks

The Return: 15% of company

JOIN THE CLUB,
and we can revolutionize
the menopause experience together.

flashclub

BEHIND THE SCENES

Research:
Market
Value

B www.bloomberg.com

Hormone Replacement Therapy Market Worth $35.79 Billion by 2030 - Grand View Research Inc.

Clinical response to menopause but not as much directed therapy-related response

www.nytimes.com

Women Have Been Misled About Menopause

Hot flashes, sleeplessness, pain during sex: For some of menopause's worst symptoms, there's an established treatment. Why aren't more women offered it?

www.futuremarketinsights.com

Menopause Treatment Market

272 Pages Report| Menopause Treatment Market is anticipated to increase at a high CAGR of 5.6% (2022 to 2032), reaching a value of about US$ 22.9 Billion by 2032

www.contemporary...

Reclaiming menopause from the medics - Contemporary Psychotherapy

Paula Maddison Image: 'Wonder woman et la ménopause' by pichenettes (Creative Commons BY-NC-ND 2.0 licence through Flickr.com) Menopause is a profound biopsychosocial transition experienced by every woman, usually in her 40's and 50's but can be earlier...

"It is curious that it is not considered a 'disease' or 'condition' when all it has done is allowed the construction of menopause as a purely medical problem to go unchallenged. It is not just how medicalised that 'menopause' can be, but the way it is framed while therapy will seek with 'menopause and aging'."

The Observer Opinions

The new menopause market has been well and truly tapped | Eva Wiseman

The menopause market is worth an estimated $600bn - and producers are falling over themselves to target women with everything they might need, from underwear to scents

Menopause as a market valued at 600billion

Focus on HRT, pseudoscience wellness, but NOT therapy to get through it.

20% of American workforce experiencing menopause each year

Why it matters

People are talking about hormones more and what it means to them. It's a hot topic that people are constantly researching.

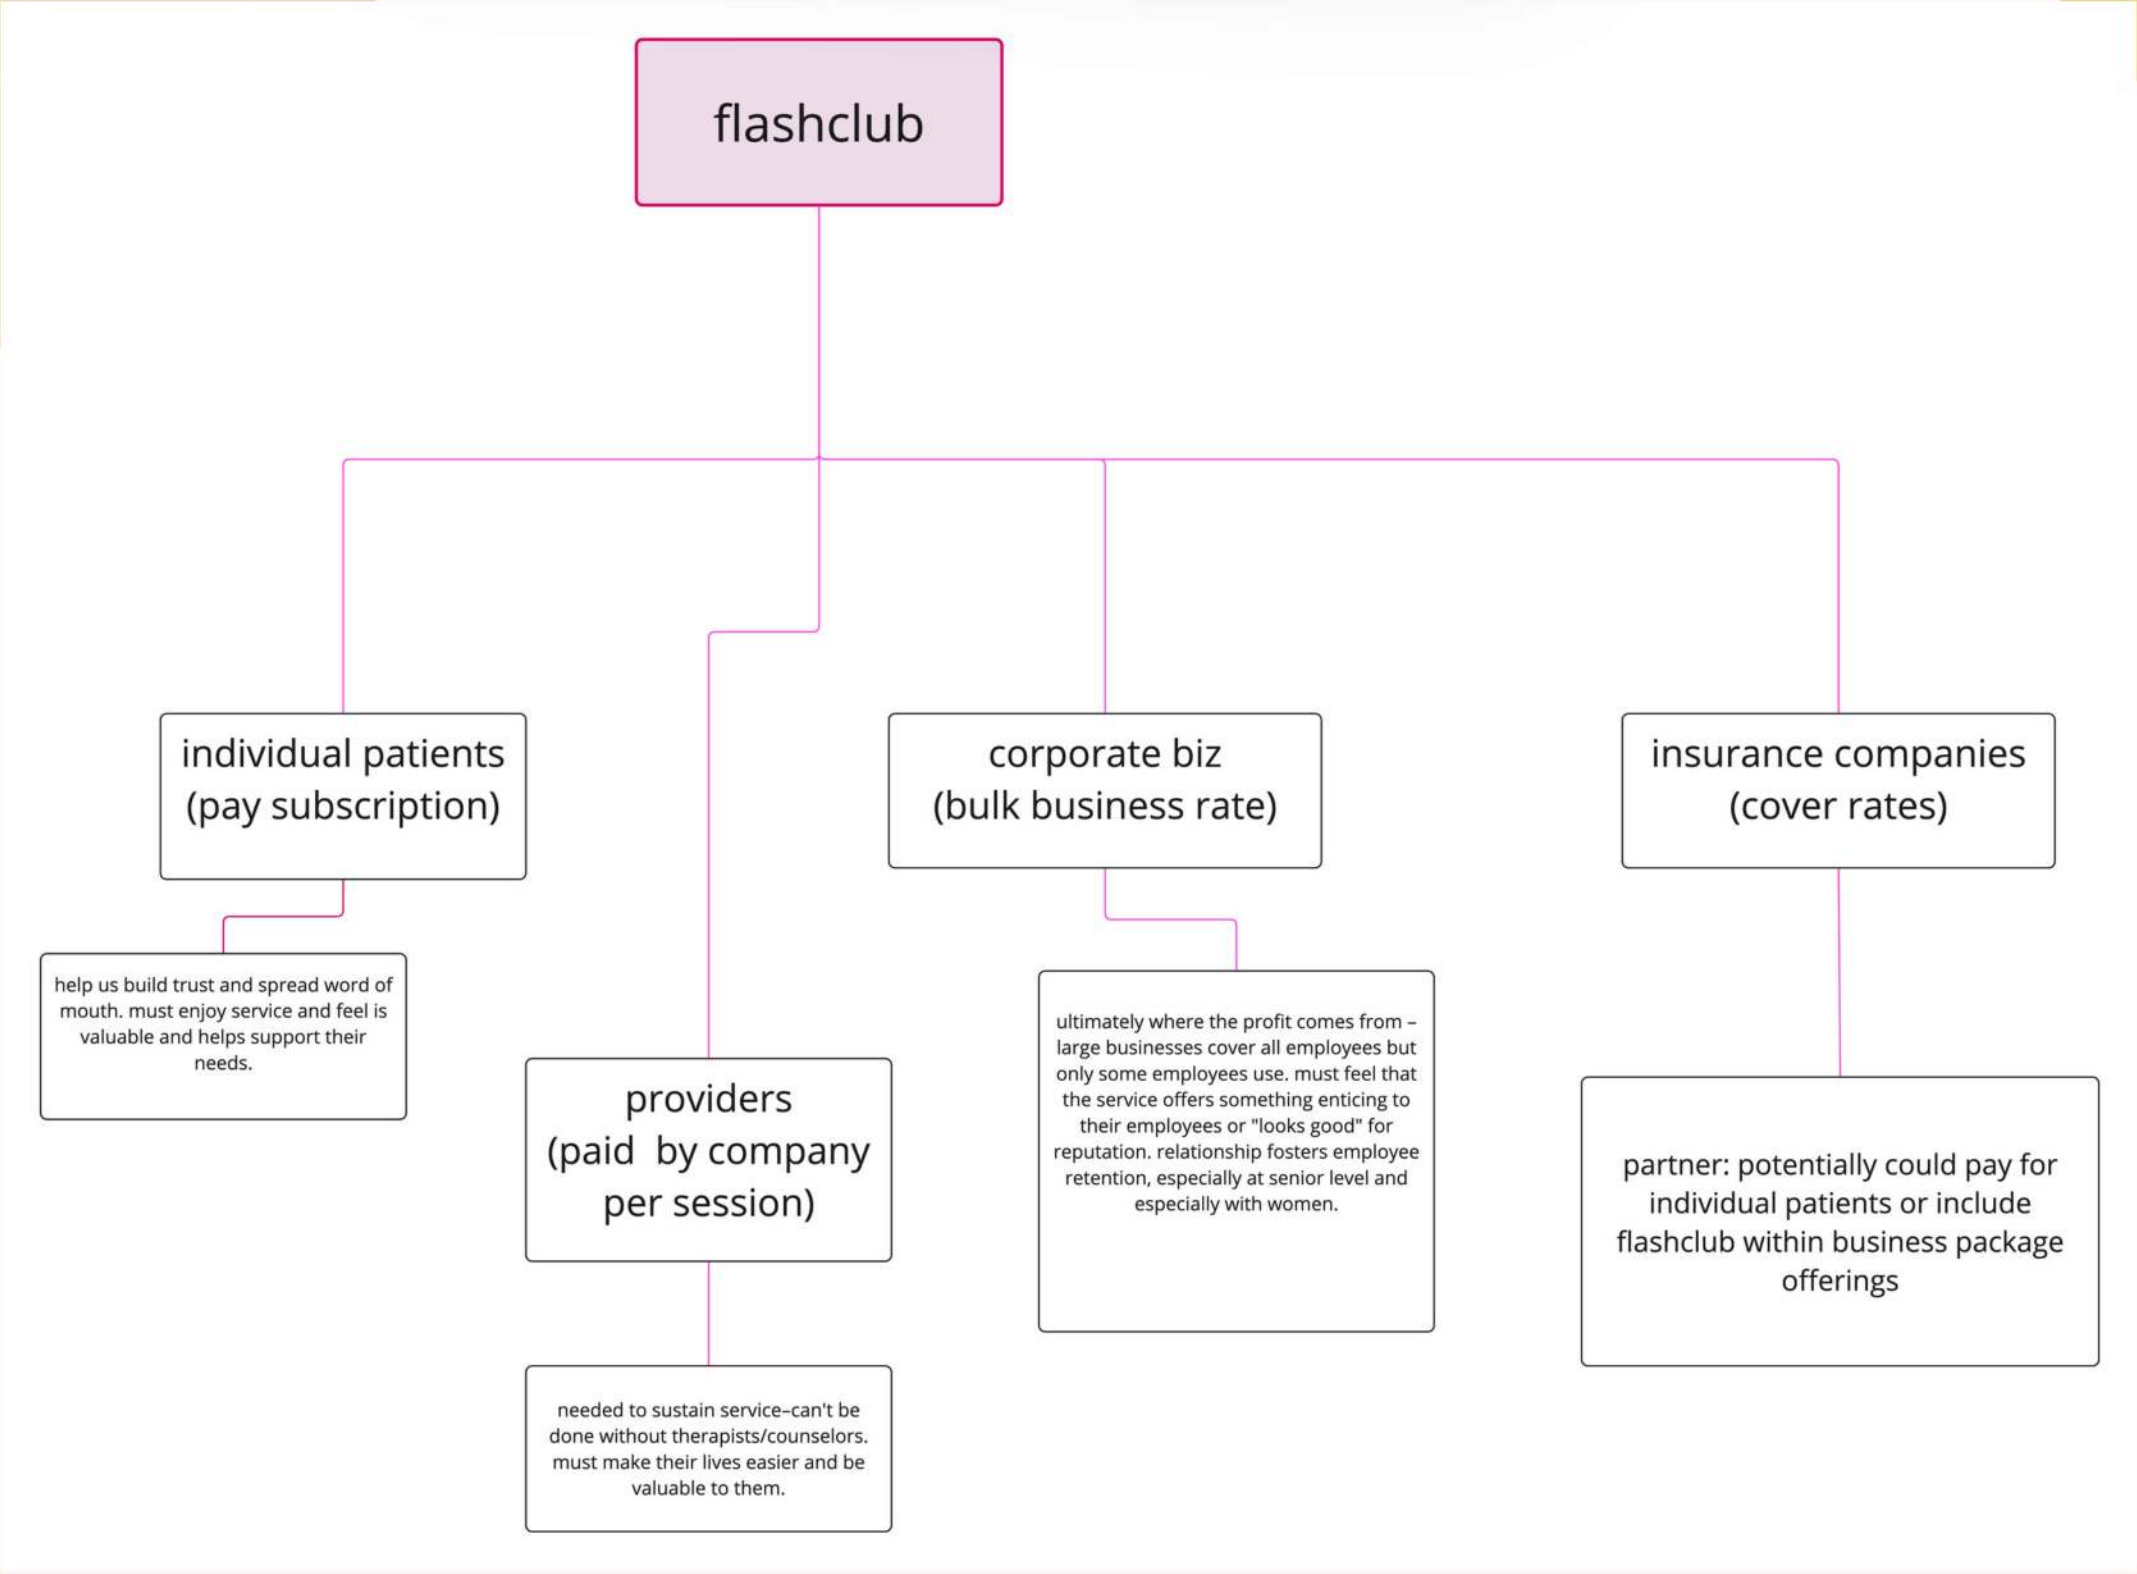

Hormone changes have an enormous impact on quality of life, body changes, emotional stability, etc. These changes need "hormonal" support as well as clinical support.

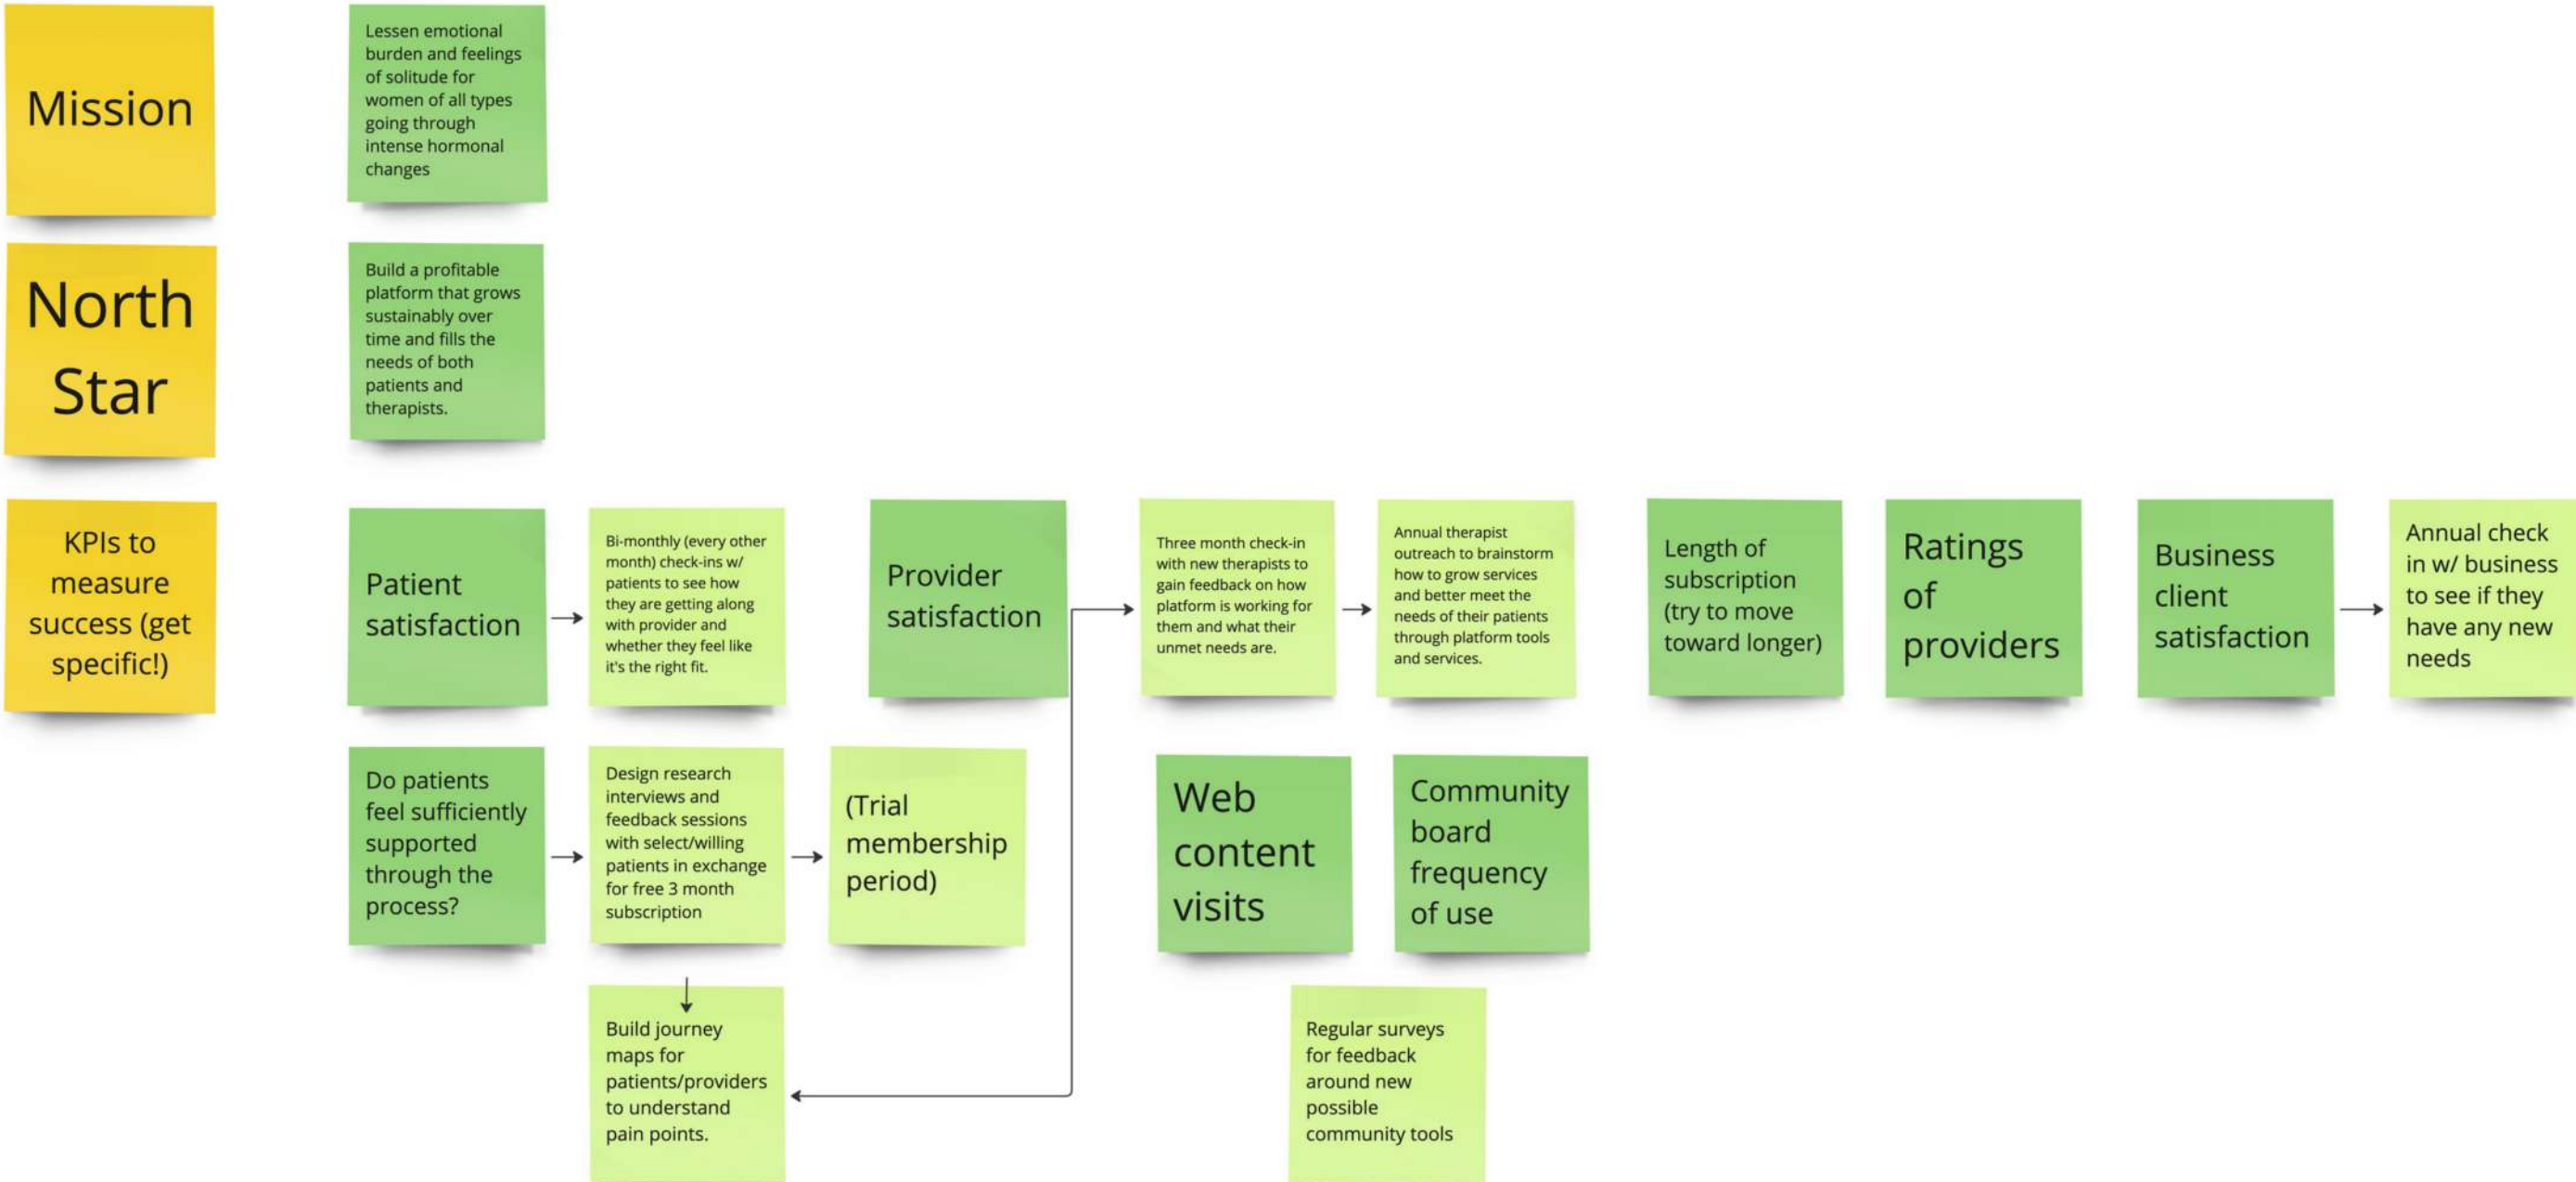

A number of people women in menopause, transitioning menopause, or even premenopausal, have been questioning about how to deal with these changes. And it's not just about the physical changes, but the emotional changes, too. People are looking for support as well as clinical support.

Businesses supporting Menopause is a new trend. They would be advocates for offering this service to their employees as support for get in need.

Need to focus not on FIXING it but on REFRAMING it

"Fertility is revealed as fleeting, and a person's femininity comes starkly into question. We talk about feeling "invisible" as we age out of the period in which women are valued, as child-bearers or workers or figures of great and glorious beauty. Men retain their value as they get older, are propelled in fact, by their wisdom, their salt-and-pepper hair, but women's worth drops as our bodies droop – we're stuck within the tightest definition of femininity. These are the things, these are the realisations we wrestle with as menopause approaches. There should be a sense of freedom, shouldn't there – the feeling that we are finally untethered from childbearing and those long dawn hours attempting to be beautiful, but of course there's not. Our world has not yet granted us that. But it takes more than a scented spray to change it."

Costs Involved

$ OUT

Research and design team, sales team, contract rates for therapy hours, marketing and community manager, tech support and platform development

$ IN

Individual subscriptions, corporate subscriptions for Tier 1 & 2 memberships, possibility of health insurance payments.

Future growth research topics: specialized training programs, conferences, menopause tourism

Business model canvas.

KEY PARTNERS • Large corporations that offer mental health services to employees • Mental health professionals who have significant experience with or specialization in working with individuals tackling hormone transitions or fluctuations. • Medical professionals who work with hormone treatments and/or OBGYNs who can recommend the service as additional support to their own programs. • Menopause Society of America as a way to help find therapists with a specialty in menopause. • Technology partners to help maintain online platform, including payment processing options, video software, chat forum management, storage, etc. • Marketing and PR partners to help spread awareness around emotional support for menopause patients and reach new audiences. • Insurance companies as possible payment partners.	KEY ACTIVITIES • Allowing users to search through a curated selection of vetted mental health professionals who already have experience in this very specific type of physical/emotional change. • Offer community channels for users to interact with each other as support systems. KEY RESOURCES • Online platform services and IT • Design/research for user experience and employee experience • Sales tools (CRM) for relationships w/ corporate accounts • Data analytics for tracking metrics. • Health insurance relationships to try to include health insurance as coverage for subscription down the line. • Payment systems to offer contract employees fast payment.	VALUE PROPOSITIONS • Flashclub is an online platform that pairs individuals with mental health practitioners that specialize in emotional management of the side affects that accompany menopause, while also providing an online community space for people to interact with others who may be experiencing similar circumstances. WHY • Menopause/hormone changes (whether due to natural fluctuations, surgery, or medication) have an enormous effect on a person's physical body, their quality of life, and their mental stability. And yet, it is nearly impossible to find mental health services from individuals who are specialized in the life altering affects hormonal changes—which often include drastic changes in: perception of body or self-worth, desire or sex drive (thereby also impacting on intimate partnerships), and identity issues related to one's "new" reality vs. one's "former self." • Corporate American has been under pressure to better support women through menopause, gender transition, cancer and other life-altering issues. By partnering with Flashclub, businesses can entice new employees and enhance employee retention, creating a supportive work environment. • Mental health professionals can have a hard time targeting clients in a sea of providers, as well as maintaining costs related to a place to practice. Flashclub offers streamlines services for health professionals to think only about counseling—not real estate, insurance, or finding clients.	CUSTOMER RELATIONSHIPS • Relationships w/ individual users through outreach and marketing campaigns. Relationship should be focused on support, empowerment, community, and reframing one's narrative. • Partnerships with medical organizations or mental health advocates to offer a much needed service to their own patients/users. Relationship should be mutually beneficial and specific to women's health (inclusive of trans women health). • Relationships w/ corporate businesses and insurance companies through sales team and b2b marketing. Primarily financial. CHANNELS • Flashclub web platform for finding mental health providers. // Flashclub community boards and online meet-up groups. • Marketing newsletter with evidenced-based hormone-related content (this is not Goop!) and mental wellness content. • Social media for community building and information sharing, general uplifting and empowering messaging. • Paid advertising through womens health podcasts and targeted womens health online advertising. • B2B Channels for Corporate sales of memberships.	CUSTOMER SEGMENTS • Individual Users: • Women experiencing menopause 6k/day in the US alone; over 2million a year • Women experiencing surgical menopause • Individuals on hormonal suppressant medication • Individuals taking hormonal enhancement medication • Possible expansion to also include mental health resources for partners of individuals experiencing hormone changes. • Mental health professionals that are looking for a way to tap into a targeted network of individuals and practice remotely through telehealth sessions. • Corporate businesses that want to buy corporate subscriptions to support employees with healthcare related to menopause, cancer, transition, etc. • Insurance companies looking to offer mental health services to entice new clientele.
COST STRUCTURE Design and Tech team to build platform specific to user needs, sales team to manage relationships and accounts with corporate clients or insurance companies, research and content creation for social media/newsletter marketing, community manager to oversee building community engagement within platform and user groups, advertising, hourly payment to mental health professionals that partner with the company (less than fee collected through platform), admin to process insurance payments			REVENUE STREAMS Corporate account fees for offering digital counseling service to business employees, Service fees from individual users for digital counseling sessions

Adapted from businessmodelgeneration.com